North Carolina House District 63

BIOGRAPHY/ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Ian Baltutis 	Bio: Ian Baltutis is a city planner, entrepreneur, and public servant with more than 20 years of service to Alamance County. As Burlington's youngest-ever mayor, he helped revitalize downtown, expand parks, and launch the LINK regional transit system. He later earned a Master's in City and Regional Planning from UNC-Chapel Hill to strengthen his expertise in budgeting, housing, and infrastructure, and now serves on the Burlington City Council. Why he's Running: Ian is running because he believes local government should solve real problems and give every resident a voice in shaping their community. He wants to bring practical leadership, sound fiscal management, and thoughtful planning to address the challenges facing Alamance County while ensuring government works with the people—not just for them.
Platform:	Cost of living: • Will fight to ease financial pain by lowering the cost for working families Housing • Tackle the Housing Crisis with smart growth and by building houses that people can afford Economy • Make Honest Budgets to fund public schools, promote public safety, and attract businesses that bring good-paying jobs Equity & Representation • Defend Local Communities and return decision-making power to the people Transparency & Accountability

	• Keeping lines of communication open, “go to the community,” and ensuring residents know what’s happening. • Different from the current council, which he says avoids the public eye.
