DOWN HOME
NORTH CAROLINA

Samira Khan
Board of Education

BIOGRAPHY/ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Bio:
Samira Khan is an educator, community leader, and longtime Burlington resident running for the Alamance-Burlington School System Board of Education. She currently teaches at Guilford Technical Community College and holds a Doctorate in Educational Leadership from High Point University. As an immigrant, former English language learner, and mother of three, Samira understands firsthand the importance of accessible, high-quality education. For more than 15 years, she has served the Burlington community through literacy programs, support for refugee families, Habitat for Humanity, and other local initiatives.

Why she's running:
Samira Khan is running because she believes every student deserves a safe, supportive, and high-quality education. As an educator and parent, she wants to bring her experience in teaching, leadership, and community service to ensure students have opportunities to succeed, teachers have the support they need, and schools are prepared to meet the needs of a growing community.

Safety & Supportive Schools:	• Will advocate for resources and policies that prioritize student well-being and help families feel confident in their schools.
Supporting Teachers:	• Will support teachers by ensuring they have the resources, respect, and support they need to succeed, while addressing challenges that contribute to educator burnout and turnover.
Planning & Growth for Teachers:	• Believes the district must plan by investing in school facilities, expanding capacity, and making thoughtful decisions to ensure every student has access to a quality learning environment.
Opportunity for Every Student:	• Will work to ensure every student—regardless of background or circumstance—has the opportunity to succeed.